July-December 2012

A Message from Mark C. Donfried

Dear Friends and Partners,

It is my distinct privilege to write to you during this special holiday time of the year and to send you our very best greetings from the ICD.

During the year 2012, the ICD had the opportunity to implement and to develop many activities in the field of cultural diplomacy and to strengthen our relations with a set of strong partners and the international community at large. The engagement of our activities and programs has enabled decision makers, important stakeholders and communities around the world to experience the constructive potential of the engagement of cultural diplomacy. It has become evident that the interest in the field of cultural diplomacy has significantly increased.

From the feedback that we have received from our partners, we believe more firmly than ever that the practices of cultural diplomacy can assist in creating a “Concert of Harmony of Civilizations”, rather than the infamous “clash” of civilizations.

The ICD has therefore dedicated the year 2013 to develop models of applied cultural diplomacy that can be used to promote human rights and multicultural dialogue. In this bi-annual newsletter, we have outlined some of the important events and developments of the ICD in the second part of 2012 for your review. This comes with our very best wishes for a successful and prosperous new year of 2013!

Sincerely,

Mark C. Donfried

The Release of the Cultural Diplomacy Outlook 2012

In the framework of our Cultural Diplomacy Outlook 2012, December 2012 saw the release of the ICD's second annual European Private Sector Ranking Report (PSR). First initiated in 2011, the ICD PSR 2012 evaluates 100 leading European companies involvement and progression in the field of corporate diplomacy.

Multinational firms have an enormous potential to influence, and their involvement in Cultural Diplomacy can bring important benefits to themselves and society.

The report presents fascinating insights into the state of corporate cultural diplomacy, giving credit where due to a number of outstanding firms, as well as offering recommendations to help shape the future involvement in the UNGC.

The theme of multiculturalism has been an important research priority for the ICD in the Cultural Diplomacy Outlook 2012 as well. The ICD has observed in recent years many important debates and transitions in Europe as well as around the world as governments grapple with questions surrounding national identity, multiculturalism, integration and immigration. Therefore the research of the ICD in the field of multiculturalism has been dedicated to both analyzing the current challenges facing societies today, as well as review example of best practices of multiculturalism that can be applied at the local, national and international levels.

Our research in the field of women's rights is outlining the most significant challenges remaining still to be overcome as well as providing examples where these challenges have already been successfully met.

The full report and executive summary will soon be available online at www.culturaldiplomacy.org

Cultural Bridges in Germany Conference

Multiculturalism, the 2012 Global Debate: Strengthening Intercultural Relations (Berlin, November 7th - 9th, 2012 - Held parallel to "23rd Anniversary to the fall of the Berlin Wall")

Berlin, November 7th -9th, 2012 - The conference brought together leading experts and notable figures from the fields of international politics, economics, academia, diplomacy, civil society, and the private sector, who offered diverse perspectives on the issue of intercultural relations, with a particular focus on social and cultural dynamics in Germany.

The conference was one of ICD's first steps toward highlighting the growing significance of multiculturalism in our contemporary world, and paved for the way for subsequent research, which is a vital component of this initiative. The objective is to explore the current state of multiculturalism, and how state actors are responding to the challenges of cultural diversity and immigration.

The broader goal, however, is to analyze ways in which governments can develop more effective and sustainable strategies to strengthen intercultural relations and promote greater social cohesion and harmony.

YaLa Young Leaders Peace Summit August 2012

We know that social media can drive change in our modern world, and the YaLa-Young Leaders movement is one such example of this.

The YaLa Young Leaders Peace Summit
German Bundestag, August 2012

“The First Middle Eastern Youth Peace Initiative” was held from 24-26 August in Berlin, as a Summit to bring this fast-growing Facebook-based peace movement to Berlin. The Summit was a fantastic opportunity for these young change-makers to come together and discuss how they can take a strong role in shaping the Middle East and North Africa.

The ICD formalized discussion around project development, cooperation with international public and private sectors and regional civil society groups, as part of an initiative to see YaLa grow and further develop. In their Concluding Statement for the Summit, YaLa-Young Leaders wrote: “We support the forces of positive progressive change in the region, which have come to the forefront of political and civic discourse in recent years, chiefly through the active involvement of youth.”

YaLa-Young Leaders and ICD share common goal: encourage young people to be active in their own countries and in the global community, advocating for peace and human rights.

Bill Summers at the ICD House of Arts and Culture

World Renowned American instrumentalist and percussionist, Bill Summers, performed at the ICD on 15th October 2012. The event was not only a celebration of music, but also a unique opportunity to get to know the musician on a more personal level. In an interview carried out before the concert, Bill Summers spoke about the birth of jazz music in African-American ghettos and how the term “jazz” came about.

As well as discussing his native roots and hometown influences, the cultural visionary shared his views on the power of music as cultural diplomacy and talked about his own musical career, providing great tips and advice to aspiring musicians of the new “hip-hop” generation. The event was a great example of cultural diplomacy as it brought diverse people together to interact and enjoy live music in a calm and “jazzy” atmosphere. The night was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, and was a sure treat for jazz music lovers.

Cultural Diplomacy & Women's Rights

The ICD dedicated an entire component of the Annual Conference on Cultural Diplomacy to the issue of women's rights and how cultural diplomacy can assist at improving important issues such as equal access, equal rights, and equal justice for all citizens of the world, no matter which gender. The discussed proved to be inspiring in many ways, especially since the issue of women's right is currently very often left out of the global debate.

Cultural Diplomacy & Multiculturalism

The ICD dedicated a specific component of the conference to the issue of cultural diplomacy and multiculturalism to try to evaluate which best practices of multiculturalism should be replicated in other countries or regions and which practices need to be modified or adapted. Due to the interdisciplinary and international diversity of the speakers who contributed to this component the debate was both thought-provoking and inspiring.

Minister Ögmundur Jónasson, Min. of the Interior of Iceland; Former Min. of Justice & Human Rights - "The UN Genocide Convention, War Crimes Tribunals & the Politics of Justice: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives"

Especially in 2012 given the urgent and dramatic mass atrocities taking place around the world, the ICD has given a major focus on the issue of cultural diplomacy, genocide prevention and the right to protect. In addition to the engagement of the ICD around the world in 2012, we dedicated one component of the Annual Conference on Cultural Diplomacy to this issue as well. We brought together an interdisciplinary and international group of experts and practitioners to discuss the current human rights challenges, but in particular the issue of prevention and what can be done to prevent these atrocities from taking place in the future.
